Description:

I worked on the same basis as for the painting I had called common. Two individuals looking in the same direction who advocate the same speech. it's a call. unite! In Mali today we are in a very risky position. Either we take the right path, together, or the boat capsizes once and for all. That's why they sit on a blue bench. Blue is fear. Like water that reacts to all movements. Today the two camps must agree and the flowers, love, are present because the agreement must go through the recognition of the other, understanding, respect and love of each other.
